

April 2017 – Populism issue

New Internationalist

The world unspun

With rightwing populists on the rise, we need journalism that stands up for others

April 2017 – Populism issue

New Internationalist

The world unspun

With rightwing populists on the rise, we need journalism that stands up for others

Buy into a better story

In these times of mistrust and division, we need media that brings people together – not drives them apart.

By this we mean trustworthy, accurate journalism with a global focus; stories that deliver the facts, make sense of the complex, beautiful world we live in – and contain bold, bright ideas for how to change things for the better.

For the past 44 years, New Internationalist magazine has done precisely that.

We're truly independent – no media moguls, no corporate advertisers.

Now we are transforming the way we do journalism, with a radical experiment.

We want the people who share our values to become part of our organization. In return, they get a say over how we are run.

We are running a community share offer that will turn us into the biggest reader-owned media company in the world.

If you believe there needs to be more journalism like ours out there in the world, then join us –

Invest in New Internationalist and become a co-owner today!

Our community share offer runs from
1 March until 6 April 2017

New Internationalist
factsandheart.org

Buy into a better story

In these times of mistrust and division, we need media that brings people together – not drives them apart.

By this we mean trustworthy, accurate journalism with a global focus; stories that deliver the facts, make sense of the complex, beautiful world we live in – and contain bold, bright ideas for how to change things for the better.

For the past 44 years, New Internationalist magazine has done precisely that.

We're truly independent – no media moguls, no corporate advertisers.

Now we are transforming the way we do journalism, with a radical experiment.

We want the people who share our values to become part of our organization. In return, they get a say over how we are run.

We are running a community share offer that will turn us into the biggest reader-owned media company in the world.

If you believe there needs to be more journalism like ours out there in the world, then join us –

Invest in New Internationalist and become a co-owner today!

Our community share offer runs from
1 March until 6 April 2017

New Internationalist
factsandheart.org

